Dear Hiring Manager,

Please accept this letter and my attached resume as an indication of my interest in the open associate digital producer position at Pew Research Center I found on LinkedIn. Throughout my time in undergrad at American University, I used Pew Research Center's studies, articles, and data, particularly in the religion section, in my papers and projects. These studies were a valuable resource to me as a student, and I always hoped I would get a chance to give back to the fact-tank through hard work and dedication to fact based information.

The study from Pew Research Center I found most valuable to me was the one on Religion and Education Around the World. I took the data and created colored maps with QGIS software and then used Adobe InDesign to put together a booklet of these maps. It was a long project that required attention to detail and accuracy.

I support Pew Research Center's mission to provide facts and data that enriches public dialogue and giving a voice to those who are often not heard from through the Center's public opinion surveys. I plan to build on my professional background as a multimedia specialist and contribute to the fact tank's high standard of objectivity, accuracy, and transparency. As I grow professionally, I hope to apply my organizational skills and attention to detail in the face-paced work environment and become a valuable resource to Pew Research Center.

I would appreciate an opportunity to meet with you to discuss how my experience will best relate to your needs. My experience in Google Analytics and WordPress might be of special interest to you because it has resulted in positive growth in my clients' small businesses.

Thank you for your time and consideration. I can be reached via phone (218-555-0000) or email (gabriellebremer@gmail.com).

Sincerely,

Gabrielle Bremer
